

Blue Heron

Blue Herons hunt at the edge of ponds, rivers, and marshes, where they wade quietly through the water looking for food. They use their long pointed beak to catch fish, frogs, small turtles, and insects. The light color of a heron's underside helps them fool their prey by blending in with the color of the sky.

